NIO shares are trading lower amid a tweet from MoxReports stating 'i don't have a good feel for the real business prospects. But from a trading standpoint, it still seems like an "avoid" signaling investors to be cautious. $NIO pro.benzinga.com @benzinga

Replying to @Vegastrader66 and @Benzinga

@MoxReports had nothing to do w/ $NIO today. His bearish tweet came 30 minutes after it tanked. Also, he did have conviction long unlike he pretends now.

My $NIO tweet very deliberately said very clearly that i was avoiding the trade (not the stock). ie. not long or short. so @Benzinga is now getting as bad as @CNBCnow and others with misrepresenting my ideas... anyone else notice this? cc: $DDS $PLCE

With $NIO i don't have a good feel for the real business prospects. But from a trading standpoint, it still seems like an "avoid" (ie not sensible either long or short). Volatility gets ppl excited... but they often overestimate their chances of predicting the right outcome.
